Expedia Group, Inc. (“Expedia Group” or the “Company”) participates in the political process across local, state, and federal governments by informing government officials about our positions on issues significant to the Company and its shareholders, employees, partners, and customers. These issues are discussed in the context of existing and proposed laws, legislation, regulations, and policy initiatives, and any such participation must comply with all applicable legal restrictions and shall be subject to the public disclosure processes outlined in this policy.

Relatedly, the Company constructively and responsibly participates in the U.S. political process. The goal of the Company’s political contributions and expenditures is to promote the interests of the Company and our customers, and the Company makes such decisions in accordance with the processes described in this political contribution and expenditure policy and statement, without regard to the personal political preferences of the Company’s directors, officers, or employees.

Political Contributions

Consistent with U.S. federal and state laws, the Company has established the Expedia Group PAC, funded solely through employee contributions and with limited administrative support from the Company. The Vice President of Government & Corporate Affairs is responsible for the administration and supervision of the PAC, with oversight by the General Counsel. Expedia Group PAC offers eligible U.S. employees a direct means to voluntarily participate in shaping sound public policy and voicing views on issues related to our businesses. The Company does not pressure or coerce employees to make personal political expenditures or take any retaliatory action against employees who do not. The Company fully discloses all Expedia Group PAC activity on reports filed with the Federal Election Commission (FEC), which are publicly available on the FEC website - <https://www.fec.gov/data/committee/C00462879/>.

In states where it is permitted, Expedia Group makes corporate contributions to support state and local election campaigns, state party committees, state ballot measures, and other tax-exempt organizations where the money may be used for political purposes. Expedia Group operates in accordance with all relevant laws, including disclosing such contributions to the appropriate State regulatory agency, such as the secretary of state or city board of elections.

In addition, Expedia Group does not use corporate funds to donate to 501(c)(4)s besides sponsorships for events conducted by social welfare organizations, and it does not make any independent expenditures on behalf of or in opposition to political candidates.

When Expedia Group makes political contributions, it bases its contribution decisions on the best interests of the Company and sound public policy regardless of the personal views of the Board and management. The Company's Vice President of Corporate and Government Affairs reviews and approves each political contribution and expenditure made with Company or PAC funds or resources in support of any political candidate, political campaign, political party, or political committee, to ensure that it is lawful and consistent with the Company's business objectives and public policy priorities. The Company considers the following factors when considering a contribution:

- The candidate's leadership position;
- The candidate's past voting record;
- Whether the candidate sits on a Committee that affects its business
- Whether the candidate represents a State or locality where Expedia Group currently conducts business.

In addition, Expedia Group employees are active in their communities and may participate in the political process. To the extent an Expedia Group employee is active in the political process, it must be a personal decision undertaken on the employee's personal time.
